The focus of Cheong Jagerroos “Floating Island” is the integration of Eastern and Western culture within the art, combining the two in a chaotic but nonetheless inspiring way. By doing this, it is shown that these different ideas (ways of life) – “Floating Islands”, so to speak–can coexist and even flourish when together. Another point she focuses on is the fact that one can find beauty not only in construction but within deconstruction as well. This is something she have discovered while walking the fine line between the east and west.

In the past twenty years, by living and working all over the world; in Macau, Hong Kong, Shanghai, France, Switzerland, Italy, Africa, Finland, Cheong Jagerroos has naturally come across many cultures, all these different ways of life have in their own way become a part of her. These experiences have moulded her to who she is, and this is reflected in her art as glimpses from all these parts of the world "This is where the floating island name arises from as I imagine myself weaving through the world like a 'floating island'", Cheong Jagerroos stated.
